DETROIT

Detroit – America's Comeback City!

Detroit is in Michigan, right on the river that runs between Lake Huron and Lake Erie. It is just a short trip from Ontario - about four hours by road from Toronto - with two international crossing points at Sarnia and Windsor.

If you think you know Detroit - think again! In the last few years - billions of dollars in new private economic investment and development has helped transform America's comeback city... with revitalized downtown buildings, growing businesses and riverfront improvements Detroit is now a lively and appealing urban centre.

Plans are afoot to construct a $140 million streetcar system that will connect residents and visitors to restaurants, shopping, sporting venues and cultural activities along a three mile span. The streetcar will link downtown Detroit with the New Centre area – which has in the works a $650 million Red Wings Hockey Arena as the centrepiece of a new entertainment and retail development.

There are more than 40,000 hotel rooms in metro Detroit - chic and luxurious, quaint and charming, affordable and basic. And to top off the perfect city break - Detroit offers wonderful Spa experiences as well. There are day spas tucked into shopping centers and charming downtowns throughout the area. Several metro Detroit hotels nurture special relationships with local spas to ensure top-shelf service for their guests. And you can also combine excitement with relaxation by staying at one of the city's 3 casino hotels, all of which also offer luxurious spa facilities.

Henry Ford built his first car in Detroit in 1896 and the world's first concrete road was built in Detroit in 1901. Plus Detroit is the home of the first urban freeway in the US, the Davison, completed in 1942. The car industry left a huge legacy in Detroit, not least some grand architecture, and the city is surrounded by an eclectic range of beautiful towns and neighbourhoods offering wonderful shopping and dining opportunities.

Detroit gave the world the "Motown Sound" with music greats including Marvin Gaye, Smokey Robinson, The Jackson 5 and the Supremes. The Motown Museum preserves the birthplace of a musical legacy and the story of a Detroit entrepreneur who created "The Sound of Young America".

History	The French officer Antoine de La Mothe Cadillac, along with fifty-one additional French-Canadians, founded a settlement called Fort Ponchartrain du Détroit, naming it after the comte de Pontchartrain, Minister of Marine under Louis XIV. France offered free land in an effort to attract families to Detroit, which grew to 800 people in 1765, the largest city between Montreal and New Orleans. By 1778, its population was up to 2,144 and the third largest city in the Province of Quebec. During the French and Indian War (1760), British troops gained control and shortened the name to Detroit. Several tribes launched Pontiac's Rebellion (1763), including a siege of Fort Detroit, but failed to capture it. Detroit passed to the United States under the Jay Treaty (1796). In 1805, fire destroyed most of the settlement. A river warehouse and brick chimneys of the wooden homes were the sole structures to survive. From 1805 to 1847, Detroit was the capital of Michigan. As the city expanded, a geometric street layout plan developed by Augustus B. Woodward was followed. Detroit surrendered without a fight to British troops during the War of 1812 in the Siege of Detroit, was recaptured by the United States in 1813 and incorporated as a city in 1815. Prior to the American Civil War, the city's access to the Canadian border made it a key stop along the underground railroad. Many Detroiters volunteered to fight during the American Civil War, including the 24th Michigan Infantry Regiment (part of the legendary Iron Brigade)

	which fought with distinction and suffered 82% casualties at Gettysburg in 1863. During the late 19th century, several Gilded Age mansions were built east and west of the current downtown. Most notable among them was the David Whitney House located at 4421 Woodward Avenue. It was restored in 1986 & is now known as The Whitney Restaurant. During this period some referred to Detroit as the Paris of the West for its architecture, and for Washington Boulevard, recently electrified by Thomas Edison. The city had grown steadily from the 1830s with the rise of shipping, shipbuilding, and manufacturing industries. Strategically located along the Great Lakes waterway, Detroit emerged as a major transportation hub. In 1896, a thriving carriage trade prompted Henry Ford to build his first automobile in a rented workshop on Mack Avenue. During this period, Detroit was allowed to expand its borders annexing all or part of several surrounding villages and townships. In 1903 Ford founded the Ford Motor Company. Ford's manufacturing—and those of automotive pioneers William C. Durant, the Dodge brothers, Packard, and Walter Chrysler—reinforced Detroit's status as the world's automotive capital; it also served to encourage truck manufacturers such as Rapid and Grabowsky. With the factories came high-profile labour unions such as the American Federation of Labor and the United Auto Workers, which initiated strikes and other tactics in support of such things as the 8-hour day/40-hour work week, healthcare benefits, pensions, increased wages and improved working conditions. The labour activism during those years increased influence of union leaders in the city such as Jimmy Hoffa of the Teamsters and Walter Reuther of the autoworkers. The introduction of alcohol Prohibition from 1920 to 1933 turned the Detroit River into a major conduit for illegal Canadian spirits, organized in large part by the notorious Purple Gang. The 1940s saw the construction of the world's "first urban depressed freeway" ever built, the Davison, and the wartime retooling of the American automobile industry in support of the Allied powers during World War II which led to Detroit's key role as an element of the American Arsenal of Democracy. There have been six ships of the United States Navy named after the city, including USS Detroit (LCS-7). Industry spurred growth during the first half of the 20th century as the city drew tens of thousands of new residents, particularly workers from the Southern United States, to become the United States' fourth largest.

The Graystone International Jazz Museum documents jazz in Detroit. Other, prominent Motor City R&B stars in the 1950s and early 1960s was Nolan Strong, Andre Williams and Nathaniel Mayer – who all scored local and national hits on the Fortune Records label. The Fortune label was a family-operated label located on Third Avenue in Detroit, and was owned by the husband and wife team of Jack Brown and Devora Brown. Fortune, which also released country, gospel and rockabilly LPs and 45s, laid the groundwork for Motown, which became Detroit's most legendary record label. Berry Gordy, Jr. founded Motown Records which rose to prominence during the 1960s and early 1970s with acts such as Stevie Wonder, The Temptations, The Four Tops, Smokey Robinson & The Miracles, Diana Ross & The Supremes, the Jackson 5, Martha and the Vandellas, The Spinners, Gladys Knight & the Pips, and Marvin Gaye. Artists were backed by the Funk Brothers, the Motown house band that was featured in Paul Justman's 2002 documentary film Standing in the Shadows of Motown, based on Allan Slutsky's book of the same name. The Motown Sound played an important role in the crossover appeal with popular music, since it was the first African American owned record label to primarily feature African-American artists. Aretha Franklin, another Detroit R&B star, carried the Motown Sound. Local artists and bands rose to prominence in the 1960s and 70s including: the MC5, The Stooges, Bob Seger, Amboy Dukes featuring Ted Nugent, Mitch Ryder and The Detroit Wheels, Rare Earth, Alice Cooper, and Suzi Quatro.
