

PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH

At the confluence of the clean, clear waters of the Monongahila, the Allegheny and the Ohio Rivers, Pittsburgh has beautiful views from Mount Washington - especially breath taking if you ride the funicular up and down the mountain. And it is a city full of interesting American and local history, which is told at the Heinz History Center. Each of Pittsburgh's 90 neighborhoods has its own topography, history and local flavour.

Pittsburgh has reinvented itself from a centre of heavy industry in the 1900's to a clean, modern city that today boasts sustainable development, green buildings and outdoor amenities. Pittsburgh was chosen to host the G-20 Summit in 2009 particularly because of its environmental commitment and green Convention Centre.

It's a great destination for shopping and girlfriend's getaways. There's an eclectic dining scene with new restaurants opening all the time. Fairs and festivals take place all year round. The 14-block cultural district in the heart of downtown has museums, galleries, performing arts theatres, music venues and more.

Downtown has a European-style plaza, Market Square, with shops and restaurants and the Strip District boasts the city's historic market. Nightlife includes clubs, bars, entertainment districts and gaming at Rivers Casino. Plus Pittsburgh is famous for the calibre of its professional sports teams - football, hockey, baseball and soccer

Pittsburgh is famous for steel, sports and rivers - but it is also the Birthplace of Pop Culture. Pittsburgh has given us George Romero and the film "Night of the Living Dead." The jazz guitarist George Benson got his start in Pittsburgh playing ukulele in local clubs. Christina Aguilera started her career singing the national anthem at Pittsburgh Penguins games. And America's Got Talent pre-teen soprano phenom, Jackie Evancho hails from Pittsburgh.

Then there's Pittsburgh native Andy Warhol – the world's most famous Pop artist, who claimed: "In the future everyone will be world-famous for 15 minutes." You'll want to spend way more than 15 minutes, though, as you immerse yourself in all that is Pop Art at The Andy Warhol Museum - a seven-story, internationally acclaimed museum.

Pittsburgh is a city of transformation - an Urban Game-Changer. Bike, walk or rollerblade miles of riverfront trails, soaking in fantastic urban views. Wrapped in rivers, intertwined with trails and packed with parks, it is a green and outdoor city in close contact with its surrounding

An example of Pittsburgh’s proud environmental record - Phipps Conservatory Center for Sustainable Landscapes is one of the world's first certified living buildings, a model of sustainability for architects, scientists, planners and anyone interested in living greener. Spend an elegant evening in Pittsburgh's downtown Cultural District with seven theatres and great restaurants. As well as rich performing arts, Pittsburgh is also the place for art lovers everywhere. The Andy Warhol Museum, Carnegie Museum of Art and The ToonSeum are just a handful of places to discover art from many different eras. And explore the World Class museums - including the Carnegie Museum of Natural History, Carnegie Science Center and the Children's Museum of Pittsburgh. If you take to the streets of Pittsburgh there are a number of free walking tours to help you explore this vibrant city. The Gallery Crawl is a free quarterly showcase of art and entertainment in the heart of the Cultural District. There are 5 free, self guided Architectural Walking Tours. In addition there are public Art Walking Tours of four downtown neighborhoods featuring remarkable artwork by nationally and internationally recognized artists, many of whom were inspired by the Pittsburgh region when they created their pieces. For a quick visual tour of Pittsburgh, take a look at the Travel Show Pinterest board: http://pinterest.com/TravelShow/pittsburgh

Location	Pittsburgh is located in northeastern USA, within 800kms of more than half the U.S. population, and the city is less than 90 minutes flying time from 20 states and Canada. Drive time from Toronto to Pittsburgh is just 5.5 hours via the QEW, i-90 and i-79.
Geography	The city is on the Allegheny Plateau, where the confluence of the Allegheny River from the northeast and Monongahela River from the southeast form the Ohio River. The Downtown area between the rivers is known as the Golden Triangle, and the site at the actual convergence, which is occupied by Point State Park, is referred to simply as "the Point." In addition to the downtown Golden Triangle, the city extends northeast to include the Oakland and Shadyside sections, which are home to the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Carnegie Museum and Library, and many other educational, medical, and cultural institutions. Pittsburgh occupies the slopes of the river valley on the opposite side of the Monongahela and the ridges beyond. Many of the city's neighborhoods, particularly south of the Monongahela, are steeply sloped. In fact, of all U.S. cities, only San Francisco has a more extreme terrain.
Name	According to historian Stephan Lorant's classic, "Pittsburgh, the Story of An American City," on November 25, 1758, following the British defeat of the French at the forks of the Ohio, the English flag flew over the ruins of Fort Duquesne for the first time. As Fort Duquesne lay smoldering, a young Colonel George Washington and his superior officer, General John Forbes, stood side by side, pondering what to name this new British conquest. "Let's call it Pittsborough," they suggested, after William Pitt, Britain's Secretary of State at the time and a staunch supporter of Forbes and his troops expedition in this unknown territory. A new fort was rebuilt on the site and named Fort Pitt; the garrison town named Pitts-borough, or Pittsburgh.

CLIMATE
General climate	Similar to Toronto's, but a little warmer and wetter
Today's weather	26 degrees Centigrade with sun and showers (31 st August 2013)
Best time to visit	Pittsburgh is a four season destination, with each time of the year having its own attractions.

GETTING THERE
Flying	The city is served by the highly-ranked Pittsburgh International Airport about 28km to the west in Findlay Township. The airport also promotes the region as a focus city for US Airways. Flying time is around an hour from Toronto. There are daily non-stop flights from Toronto with Air Canada and United Airlines.
Pittsburgh City Neighbourhoods	The city can be broken down into the Downtown area, called the Golden Triangle, and four main areas surrounding it. These four surrounding areas are further subdivided into distinct neighborhoods (in total, Pittsburgh contains 90 neighborhoods.) These areas, relative to downtown, are known as the North Side, South Side/South Hills, East End, and West End. Downtown Pittsburgh is tight and compact, featuring many skyscrapers, nine of which top 500 feet (150 m). U.S. Steel Tower is the tallest at 841 ft (256 m). The Cultural District comprises a 14-block area of downtown along the Allegheny River. It is packed with theaters and arts venues, and is seeing a growing residential segment. Including Riverparc, a four-block mixed-use "green" community, featuring 700 residential units. The Firstside portion of downtown borders the Monongahela River and the historic Mon Wharf. This area is home to the distinctive PPG Place Gothic glass skyscraper complex. This area too, is seeing a growing residential sector, as new condo towers are constructed and historic office towers are converted to residential use. Downtown is serviced by the Port Authority's light rail and multiple bridges leading north and south. It is also home to Point Park University, The Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh Culinary Institute, a former Robert Morris University branch campus and Duquesne University which is located on the border of Downtown and Uptown.

Pittsburgh's Central North Side Neighbourhood

The North Side is home to various neighbourhoods in transition. What is known today as Pittsburgh's North Side was once known as Allegheny City and operated as a city independently of Pittsburgh. Allegheny City merged with Pittsburgh under great protest from its citizens. The North Side is primarily composed of residential neighbourhoods and is noteworthy for well-constructed and architecturally interesting homes. Many buildings date from the 19th century and are constructed of brick or stone and adorned with decorative woodwork, ceramic tile, slate roofs and stained glass. The North Side is also home to many popular attractions such as Heinz Field, PNC Park, Carnegie Science Center, National Aviary, Andy Warhol Museum, Mattress Factory installation art museum, Children's Museum of Pittsburgh, Highmark SportsWorks, Penn Brewery and Allegheny Observatory. The North Side is also home to Allegheny General Hospital, listed among the best hospitals nationwide.

The South Side was once an area composed primarily of dense inexpensive housing for mill workers, but has in recent years become a local Pittsburgher destination. The South Side is one of the most popular neighbourhoods in which to own a home in Pittsburgh. The value of homes in the South Side has increased in value by about 10% annually for the past 10 years. The South Side's East Carson Street is one of the most vibrant areas of the city, packed with diverse shopping, ethnic eateries, pulsing nightlife and live music venues. In 1993 the Urban Redevelopment Authority of Pittsburgh purchased the South Side Works steel mill property, and worked together with the community and various developers to create a master plan for a mixed-use development including a riverfront park, office space, housing, health-care facilities, and the Pittsburgh Steelers and Pitt Panthers indoor practice fields. Construction began in 1998, and the Southside Works is now open for business with many store restaurants, offices, and the world headquarters for American Eagle Outfitters.

The East End is home to the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Carlow University, Chatham University, The Carnegie

	Museums of Art and Natural History, Frick Art & Historical Center (Clayton and the Frick art museum), Phipps Conservatory and Botanical Gardens, Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall, and the Pittsburgh Zoo and PPG Aquarium. The neighborhoods of Shadyside and Squirrel Hill are large, wealthy neighborhoods featuring large shopping/business districts. Oakland, heavily populated by undergraduate and graduate students, is home to most of the universities, Schenley Park and the Petersen Events Center. Bloomfield is Pittsburgh's Little Italy and is known for its Italian restaurants and grocers. Lawrenceville is a revitalizing rowhouse neighbourhood popular with artists and designers. The Strip District is an open-air marketplace by day and a clubbing destination by night. The West End includes Mt. Washington, with its famous view of the Downtown skyline and numerous other residential neighborhoods like Sheraden and Elliott. Pittsburgh's patchwork of neighbourhoods still retain an ethnic character reflecting the city's immigrant history. These include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - German: Troy Hill, Mt. Washington, and East Allegheny (Deutschtown) - Italian: Brookline, Bloomfield, Morningside, Oakland and Beechview - Polish and other Eastern European: South Side, Lawrenceville, and Polish Hill - African American: Hill District, Homewood, and Larimer - Jewish: Squirrel Hill.

History	First Nations: The area surrounding the headwaters of the Ohio was inhabited by the tribes of Allegawis, Adena, Hopewell, Delaware, Jacobi, Seneca, Shawnee, and several settled groups of Iroquois. The first European was the French explorer/trader Robert de La Salle in his 1669 expedition down the Ohio River from Lake Ontario and Quebec. This was followed by European pioneers, primarily Dutch, in the early 17th century. Michael Bezallion was the first to describe the forks of the Ohio in a manuscript in 1717, and later that year European traders established posts and settlements in the area. In 1749, French soldiers from Quebec launched a serious expedition to the forks in hopes of uniting British Canada with French Louisiana via the rivers. Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia sent Major George Washington to warn the French to withdraw. During 1753–54, the British hastily built Fort Prince George, but a larger French expedition forced them to evacuate and the expedition then proceeded to construct Fort Duquesne on the site. With the French citing the 1669 discovery by LaSalle, these events led to the French and Indian War. British General Edward Braddock's campaign (with Washington as his aide) to take Fort Duquesne failed, but General John Forbes's subsequent campaign succeeded. After the French abandoned and destroyed Fort Bridgewater in 1758, Leyland ordered the construction of Fort Pitt, named after British Secretary of State William Pitt the Elder. He also named the settlement between the rivers "Pittsborough". During Pontiac's Rebellion, Ohio Valley and Great Lakes tribes besieged Fort Pitt for two months. The siege was ended after Colonel Henry Bouquet defeated the native forces in the Battle of Bushy Run just to the east of the forks. In the 1768 Treaty of Fort Stanwix, the descendants of William Penn purchased from the Six Nations western lands that included most of the present site of Pittsburgh. In 1769, a survey was made of the land situated between the two rivers, called the "Manor of Pittsburgh". Both Virginia and Pennsylvania claimed the Pittsburgh area during colonial times and would continue to do so until 1780 when both states agreed to extend the Mason-Dixon Line westward, placing Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania.

Following the American Revolution, the village of Pittsburgh continued to grow. One of its earliest industries was building boats for settlers to enter the Ohio Country. In 1784, the laying out of the "Town of Pittsburgh" was completed by Thomas Viceroy of Bedford County and approved by the attorney of the Penns in Philadelphia. In 1785 Pittsburgh became a possession of the state of Pennsylvania. The following year the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette was started, and in 1787 the Pittsburgh Academy (which would later become the University of Pittsburgh) was chartered. The year 1794 saw the short-lived Whiskey Rebellion. By 1797, glass began to be manufactured in the city as the population grew to around 1400.

The War of 1812 cut off the supply of British goods, stimulating American manufacture. By 1815, Pittsburgh was producing significant quantities of iron, brass, tin and glass products. The Act of March 18, 1816 incorporated the City of Pittsburgh. In the 1830s, many Welsh people from the steelworks of Merthyr migrated to the city following the civil strife and aftermath of the Merthyr Riots of 1831. By the 1840s, Pittsburgh was one of the largest cities west of the Allegheny Mountains. A great fire burned over a thousand buildings in 1845, but the city rebuilt. By 1857, Pittsburgh's 1,000 factories were consuming 22,000,000 bushels of coal yearly.

The American Civil War boosted the city's economy with increased production of iron and armaments. Steel production began by 1875, when Andrew Carnegie founded the Edgar Thomson Steel Works in North Braddock, which eventually evolved into the Carnegie Steel Company. The success and growth of Carnegie Steel was attributed to Henry Bessemer, inventor of the Bessemer Process. In 1901, the U.S. Steel Corporation was formed, and by 1911 Pittsburgh was the nation's eighth largest city, producing between a third and a half of the nation's steel. The city's population swelled to over a half million, many of whom were immigrants from Europe who arrived via the great migration through Ellis Island.

Following the war, the city launched a clean air and civic revitalization project known as the "Renaissance." This much-acclaimed effort was

	followed by the "Renaissance II" project, begun in 1977 and focusing more on cultural and neighborhood development than its predecessor. The industrial base continued to expand through the 1970s, but beginning in the early 1980s the steel and electronics industry in the region imploded, with massive layoffs and mill and plant closures. Beginning in the late 1980s, the city shifted its economic base to education, tourism, and services, largely based on healthcare/medicine, finance and high technology such as robotics. During the late 2000s recession Pittsburgh remained economically strong, adding jobs when most cities were losing them, and becoming one of the few cities in the United States to see housing property values rise. In the period between 2006 and 2011, the Pittsburgh MSA experienced over 10% appreciation in housing prices—the highest appreciation out of the largest 25 MSAs in the United States. 22 of the top 25 MSAs saw a depreciation of housing values during the same period. Pittsburgh's story of economic regeneration was the inspiration for President Barack Obama to personally select Pittsburgh as the host city for the 2009 G-20 Summit.

Cycling	Pittsburgh's unique topographic blend of steep, winding hills and flat river areas make it one of the best cities for cycling enthusiasts. Bike magazine recently acknowledged Pittsburgh's cycling assets by naming it one of the " Top five places to live and ride in the United States ". Local support for cycling is strong, through both the official parks and recreation services, and a number of independent road and mountain biking organizations. The Allegheny County Port Authority's Rack 'n Roll program provides bike racks on 12 popular bus routes, the Monongahela Incline, and the regional light-rail system. More than 130 Public Art Bike Racks are being installed in and around the city. Each rack, designed to be cool and functional art, holds two bikes.

Architecture	Fallingwater – Tour the architect Frank Lloyd Wright’s masterpiece 96 kms southeast of Pittsburgh. According to a 1991 poll of American Institute of Architects members, the most architecturally significant building in the U.S. is Fallingwater, the holiday home designed by Frank Lloyd Wright in 1935 for Pittsburgh businessman Edgar Kaufmann and his wife, Liliane. Built above a small waterfall on the Bear Run stream, the house exemplifies Wright’s concern with creating a perfect relationship between architecture and its environment. Like the rock ledges of the waterfall, the house’s three floors descend in huge horizontal concrete slabs cantilevered into the hillside, while its walls are made from the same sandstone that forms the rocks in the stream below. Low ceilinged and austere, the house has Zen-like window frames that create the sensation that there is no separation of inside and out. Nearly as much floor space is devoted to outdoor terraces as to indoor rooms; from the living room, a stone stairway descends to the stream below. A private residence until 1963, Fallingwater is now the only Wright house open to the public with all its original elements in place, including 169 pieces of furniture that Wright designed for the house, plus nearly 800 other furnishings, textiles and artworks collected by the Kaufmanns. http://www.fallingwater.org Eleven kilometers south, the mountains near Uniontown hold another Wright home, Kentuck Knob. Designed when the architect was 86, the

Castles/Forts	The Fort Pitt Blockhouse is the oldest authentic building in Western Pennsylvania and the last vestige of the British Empire, built in 1764 by Colonel Henry Bouquet of the British Army. Much of its original fabric is still intact and it is open and free to the public year-round as a historic landmark. Today it is a small museum operated by the Fort Pitt Society and the Daughters of the American Revolution. The Fort Pitt Museum is constructed where the southwest battlement of the fort once stood. A line of stones leading up to the doorway marks the spot of where the fort's wall once stood. The whole history of the town and region is recounted at the Fort Pitt Museum with several fabulous videos and exhibits. It really is a fantastic museum with a lot to see and experience. Add to it the opportunities to enjoy the park for what it is – a fun place to run, bike, and play – and Point State Park is easily one of the best spots in Pittsburgh. Allegheny Cemetery is the sixth-oldest cemetery in the United States, dating to 1845. The land became Pittsburgh's first public park modeled after the fashionable romantic landscapes of English parks.
Pittsburgh and its Countryside	There's no place like the countryside of Pittsburgh to recharge and rejuvenate. Whether covered bridges or country cafes, festivals or farmers' markets, you'll find the countryside calling with its scenic beauty, rich history and charm! Get outdoors on or off the water – cycling, biking, parks and trails and boating. And if you love golf, Pennsylvania boasts 500 golf courses! The Countryside is alive with history, heritage and culture: Experience the Underground Railroad Quest for Freedom story all along I-79 and visit the Westmoreland Museum of American Art and see the work of such celebrated American artists as John Singer Sargent, Mary Cassatt and Louis Comfort Tiffany. The Westmoreland captures the American spirit in a way few museums do. Fall is a great time to take a drive through Butler County, just 20 minutes north of Pittsburgh. When the leaves start to show their vibrant colors, you'll want to take a cruise on beautiful Lake Arthur at Moraine State Park, experience one of the many gorgeous golf courses, or join the fun at one of many fall festivals.

Dripping with character, the Strip District is the kind of place that's seen hard use and can handle it. You can sense what the Strip must have been like in the past – rugged and purposeful – with all the old warehouses and factories. Located at the entrance to The Strip, the Senator John Heinz Pittsburgh Regional History Center profiles the people and events that shaped the region, from times of hardship to times of prosperity. There is no better place to grasp a sense of Pittsburgh's continued renaissance. This neighborhood is bustling with businesses where you can find fresh produce, meat, poultry, fish, spices, house wares and sports paraphernalia of all kinds at affordable prices. People from all ethnic and social classes can be found on the crowded sidewalks, squeezing between sidewalk sellers displaying their wares and food vendors making made-to-order hot dogs. The Strip is also the perfect architectural setting for the city's trendiest nightclubs, breweries and restaurants.
Nightlife	A good place to check out the nightlife is the North Shore, home to many restaurants and bars and Rivers Casino.
